Electrophysiology is a sub-specialty within Cardiology. It is the science of elucidating, diagnosing, and treating the electrical activities of the heart.

The goal of the Inherited Arrhythmia clinic is to better serve our patients by standardizing care across all providers, improve recognition of diseases, and ensure accurate and timely diagnosis. By including research specialists and genetics, in addition to EP, we can more fully understand inherited conditions as they relate to our patients and their families. This recognition will enable us to appropriately treat this population.
